PORTLAND, MAINE

THE GLADIOLUS

The Gladiolus stands without a peer as a garden flower. In no other is combined so many good qualities; among which are endless variety, long season of bloom, durable qualities when cut, ease of culture (if you succeed with ordinary garden vegetables, you can do so with Gladioli) and small cost.

By using several varieties, and planting at intervals, cut flowers may be had for three months.

Flowers, when cut, and with but little care, can be made to last for a week or more.

MAINE-GROWN BULBS

This is something more than a head-line. It means something. Most of the large eastern seed houses have their seed potatoes grown in Maine because climatic conditions produce stock which is the standard for excellence.

Here, on the Main coast, we have conditions particularly adapted for growing bulbs full of vigor, and sure to satisfy, if given fair treatment by the purchaser.

CULTURE

Plant in any good garden soil, four to six inches apart and about four inches deep, above the top of the bulb.

If stable manure is used, it should be thoroughly rotted and mixed with the soil. High-grade potato fertilizer is good; and we have had excellent results with a mixture of equal parts of bone meal and cotton seed meal.

Avoid planting near foundation walls of buildings, close to trees or large shrubs or in the shade.

PRICES

Our prices are as low as is consistent with first-class stock, and comparison with other catalogues is invited.

However, we stake our reputation on high quality rather than low price. We would excel rather than undersell.

TERMS

Cash with all orders.

Transportation prepaid to United States points on bulbs sold at single and dozen rates. Goods sold by the 100 or 1000 are forwarded collect.

Orders shipped between November 15 and March 15 are entirely at risk of purchaser.

Pure stock is our hobby, and we guarantee all stock to be healthy and true to name, and will replace any found otherwise.

Stock is offered subject to prior sale. We never substitute without permission. Stock of some varieties is limited. Get your orders in early, if you would be sure of planting Main-grown bulbs. No orders accepted for less than $1.00.

ABOUT MIXTURES

If you are planting for cut flowers, plant the named varieties; but if for garden effect, by all means plant a mixture; partly because cheaper and you get a bigger show for your money; but especially because you will miss a great treat if you fail to enjoy the pleasure of seeing the great variety of colors blending as only nature is able to do. All colors seem to harmonize; and no discord is apparent, even when several hundred varieties are blended is one grand bouquet.

OUR DIRIGO MIXTURE

This is surely a "leader," containing over 100 named varieties as well as some Primulinus hybrids well worth naming, and made up of a good proportion of early varieties, blooming will extend over a long period.

To encourage liberal planting, we are this season making a very low price, hoping that you will test the beauties of a large bed. We want to increase the number of glad gardeners, so here you are:

Choice bulbs, one inch and over in size, 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per hundred; $15.00 per thousand.

Retailed at practically wholesale prices.
